

NATIVE AMERICAN GAMES

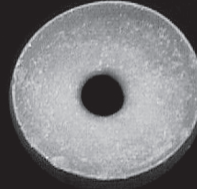

What do you do when you are bored?
How do you spend your time all summer long?
What if there weren't any video games?

Learn how the Native Americans spent their spare time many years ago. Not only kids played these games. Did you know the adults had games of their own also?

Let's all meet "At the Cache"
June 23rd at 5pm for an hour of fun learning about the Native Americans and the games they played. This is a FREE event!

Here are some examples:

Chunkey

In this game a chunkey stone was rolled over the ground or ice while several players threw spears in an attempt to indicate where the stone would stop rolling. The closest to the final location of the stone, without actually hitting the stone, was the winner.

Picaria

(Pic-a-REE-a) is a tic tac toe-like game played by the Pueblo Indians of New Mexico, similar to the Morris games played in Renaissance Europe. The object is to line your pieces up in a row of three.

Ring and Pin

This game required good hand-eye coordination. A ring was attached to a thong or cord which was then attached to a pin. The ring was swung in the air with an attempt to catch it on the pin. Woman and girls typically played this game. A similar European game is the cup and ball toss.

Double Ball

Double ball was a woman's game resembling Lacrosse, that involved tossing, catching and swift running. The players used curved sticks and a double ball, which consisted of two small oblong deerskin bags joined together by a deerskin thong. The object of the game was to get the ball over the opponent's goal.
